

Baroness Sarah Hogg

Current Positions

Baroness Sarah Hogg is currently a Senior Independent Director of the Financial Conduct Authority (FCA) and a member of the Takeover Panel (UK). She holds a Non-Executive Directorship at The Times Newspaper Holdings Limited.

Background Information

Early in her career, Baroness Sarah Hogg was responsible for the economics coverage of a number of Britain's most respected publications, including The Economist, The Times and the Daily Telegraph. She was involved in the start-up of The Independent, hiring and managing its award-winning business team from 1986 to 1989.

Thereafter she was Head of the Prime Minister's Policy Unit from 1990 to 1995 and was closely involved in the programmes of privatisation and private finance, performance measurement in public services and international economic issues. During this time she was the Prime Minister's closest adviser on the Uruguay round of trade negotiations.

Baroness Hogg has extensive experience of business, government and the media, having worked at the highest level in all three sectors. Notably she was the first woman to become Chairman of a FTSE 100 company and has sat on eight other FTSE 100 Boards.

Baroness Hogg was the founding Chairman of Frontier Economics Limited. In 2002 she became Chairman of 3i Group plc, Europe's largest listed private equity company, where she stayed until 2010, when she took on the Chairmanship of the Financial Reporting Council.

She has previously served on the Boards of BG Group plc, GKN plc, the dual-listed company Carnival Corporation and Carnival plc, as well as Cadbury plc. She was an Independent Non-Executive Director and Chairman of the Audit Committee at the John Lewis Partnership plc.

Other Notable Interests

Baroness Hogg is a Trustee of the Trusthouse Foundation, St. Mary's School in Ascot, Heritage Trust of Lincolnshire Limited, and of the Queen Elizabeth Diamond Jubilee Trust.

She was created a Life Peer in the 1995 New Year's Honours List and in 2005 she received the CBI Lifetime Award for Women in Business. Baroness Hogg has also received many honorary fellowships.

Baroness Sarah Hogg is based in London.
